3 Panel Comics with EMOTION

Stories can be told through words and through drawings, and when they're combined it's called a comic. Comics can be as long as whole books, but it really only takes 3 pictures, or panels, to tell a simple story. We can tell a story showing how a character's emotions or feelings change using visual shorthand -- a way of showing emotions.

First, draw a character and show them feeling a strong emotion.

Then, draw an action happening to that character.

Last, draw the same character, but feeling a new emotion.

You don't even need the character to say words! You can use visual shorthand to show what is happening.
