

Create a Game Show!

Give it a Listen: Season 3, Episode 25: The Girl Who Wanted to Eat The Sky/The Dice That Didn't Want to Be Rolled

What's this activity about? Making up your own game show to play with friends and family.

What stuff do I need to do it? Get creative! The supplies are up to you.

In the story "The Dice That Didn't Want to Be Rolled" by a kid from Australia named Annabel, there's a weird game show where contestants compete to become a chess piece. Making up your own game show can be lots of fun, and it's something you can do at home with friends and family. All you have to do is this:

1. Decide what the game show is about! Is it a contest where you need to accomplish something difficult, like building a structure, or making food, or doing a difficult exercise move? Do you need to answer questions? You could take math, or science, or social studies questions you've been working on for school, and make those the questions in the game. Or...make up your own totally weird idea for a game show!
2. Will one of your friends or family be the host? Do they need to dress in a special way, or hold something they can pretend is a microphone? Will there be judges? (And do you want to make each judge a "character"? Is your sister the "nice" judge, your cousin the "mean" judge, and your dog the "confused" judge?) Who are the contestants?
3. What other details will you add? What's the name of your game show? Is there theme music? What prize do you get if you win? What silly thing do you need to do if you lose? If there are friends and family you haven't seen in person for awhile, can you all get together for a game show over the internet?
